EXAMPLE #1

Hind Rajab will be remembered. The world heard her. And the world failed her.

Her legacy and global impact aligns with the Nobel Peace Prize criteria: to reduce the horrors of armed conflict, foster unity among nations, and promote enduring peace. Professor Khaled Beydoun has nominated Hind for the Nobel Peace Prize, because the world needs to remember what it allowed to happen.

Say her name. Share her story. Sign the petition.

EXAMPLE #2

Hind Rajab didn't die quietly. The world heard her. Now, her name is being lifted in honor.

Professor Khaled Beydoun has nominated Hind for the Nobel Peace Prize, not because she chose to be a hero, but because the world needs to remember what it allowed to happen.

We owe Hind more than silence.

Say her name. Share her story. Sign her petition.

Subject: Help Amplify Hind Rajab's Nobel Peace Prize Nomination

Body: Dear [Name],

I'm reaching out to ask for your support in amplifying the Nobel Peace Prize nomination of Hind Rajab—the 6-year-old Palestinian girl whose final cries for help captured the attention of the world and exposed the brutal cost of the ongoing genocide.

Hind was killed after being trapped in her family's car, surrounded by Israeli fire hitting the car with approximately 335 bullets. Her story is heartbreaking, but her voice is unforgettable.

Now, Professor Khaled Beydoun has nominated her for the Nobel Peace Prize, as symbol of a demand for justice and the childhood taken from her. We've created a digital toolkit with social content, sample posts, talking points, and actions you can take to help share Hind's story and support the campaign.

Use our toolkit to talk about, advocate for, and post about Hind's nomination. Use the hashtags #HindRajab and #NobelPeacePrize. Contact your networks, reach out to human rights organizations, activists, and public figures to boost visibility. Download the Toolkit: [Insert Link] and sign the petition today [Insert Link].

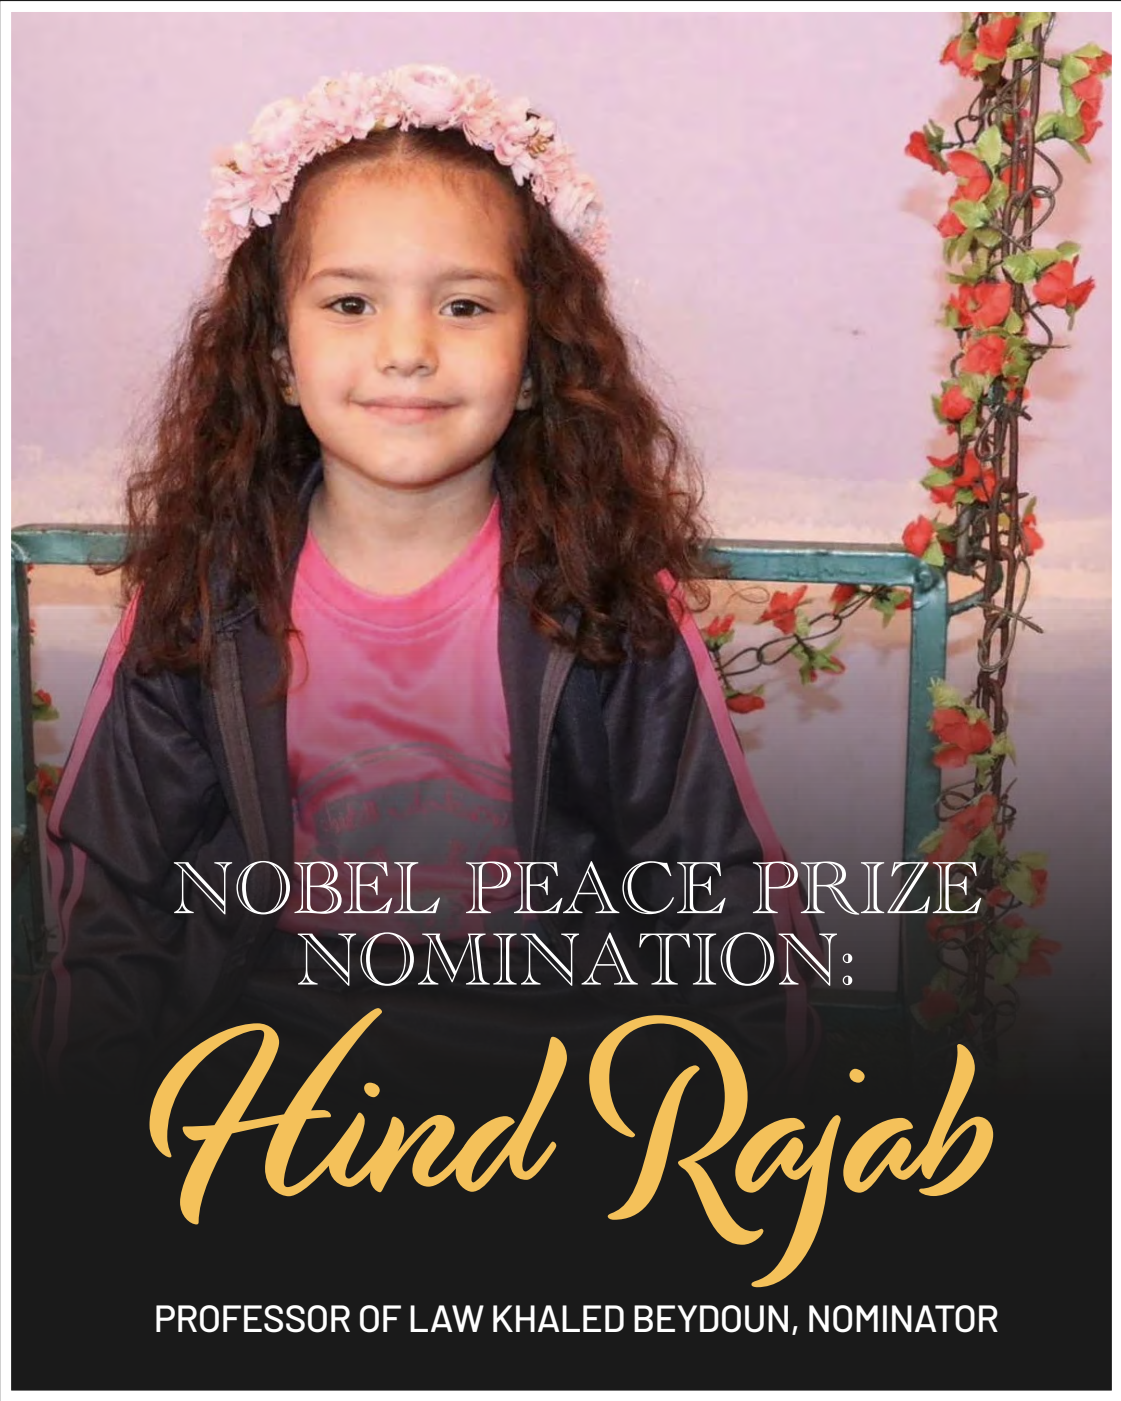

Please consider posting about her, using the toolkit, or sharing it with your network. Even one post can help the world remember her name and what it stands for.

Thank you for standing for justice and for truth.

KEY TALKING POINTS

WHY WAS SHE NOMINATED FOR THE NOBEL PEACE PRIZE?

Hind is not just one child, she is a symbol of every Palestinian child, and every child globally, who has suffered or died due to genocide. Her story embodies the pain, courage, and stolen futures of innocent children. This nomination is not just about her, it's about honoring all the children the world failed to protect.

A CALL FOR ACCOUNTABILITY AND THE END OF IMPUNITY

Awarding Hind the Nobel Peace Prize puts a spotlight on the devastating cost of the genocide and the urgent need for international protections for children. It tells the world: We see them. We hear them. And we must act. This nomination affirms that peace is not abstract. It is a right that must be secured for the most vulnerable among us.

MORAL IMPERATIVE

It is a moral demand that the international community reckon with its failure to protect the most innocent among us, especially children.

- If architects of war can be laureates, like Kissinger, Roosevelt, Obama... surely those whose deaths galvanize humanity to reject war deserve equal—if not greater—recognition.
- Nobel's will rewards the "greatest benefit to humankind," and history proves some martyrs have galvanized that mission in ways living diplomats never could.
- HindRajab's killing galvanized university campuses in the United States and across the world, painted city walls from Dublin to DC, and lit the biggest anti-war protests since Vietnam and the 1968 student protests after Dr. King's assassination... exactly the kind of pro-peace movement Alfred Nobel dreamed of honoring.

KEY TALKING POINTS

See examples below of talking points.

NO POSTHUMOUS NOMINATIONS RULE

- “No Nobel Prize may be awarded posthumously unless death occurs after the announcement.” The rule is policy, not a clause in Alfred Nobel’s will; it has already been interpreted pragmatically in exceptional cases.
- The 1974 “living-only” rule was most recently bent by trustees for Ralph Steinman in 2011, so flexibility is baked in.
- That rule was meant to stop routine memorials, not block once-in-a-generation symbols whose deaths ignite a worldwide demand for an end to the worst genocide in modern history.
- Public credibility is bleeding when Trump and Daniella Weiss qualify, while the child martyrs of Palestine, who’ve inspired this global call for peace, are sidelined on a technicality...the optics couldn’t be worse.
- Changing the rule for Hind Rajab would realign the Peace Prize with its founding ideals and contemporary moral expectations.

CALL TO ACTION TO NOBEL TRUSTEES

- Create a “Posthumous In Memoriam” category reserved for figures whose deaths spark mass, peaceful movements; make Hind Rajab the inaugural laureate.
- Pair the award with funding for trauma recovery for war-affected kids, turning symbolism into boots-on-the-ground peace-building.
- A change in rules to automatically disqualify nominees whose documented histories of violence directly contradict Alfred Nobel’s vision and undermine the mission of the Peace Prize.

CALL TO ACTION TO THE PUBLIC

- Visit bitly.com/hindpeace to sign the petition and to learn more about how to join this campaign.
- We have until October 2025 to make our voices, and we wholeheartedly believe Hind, and all the martyrs of Palestine and innocent, child victims of war deserve the Nobel Peace Prize.
